.049 GTP NISSAN

Radio Controlled 1/12 Scale On-Road Race Car

Easy To Assemble Kit

GAS POWERED

You don't need a license to drive the new Cox .049 GTP Nissan. But maybe you should.

It's got a real piston driven .049 cubic inch engine, goes over 30 MPH (that's 360 scale MPH!) and corners like it's riding on rails.

There's nothing like it.

The Cox .049 GTP Nissan runs for 15 minutes on one tank of fuel and takes just seconds to refuel.

Drive without a license. Buy the Cox .049 Nissan at your favorite hobby or toy store.

DISNEY BEAT

■ The perfectionist

If there's one line that sticks with you from The Princess Bride (see page 45), it's Mandy Patinkin's swashbuckling proclamation: "My name is Inigo Montoya. You killed my father. Prepare to die!" What follows is one of the funniest swordfight scenes since Monty Python and The Holy Grail.

Patinkin is swiftly becoming recognized not only as a fine stage and film actor, but also as a crooning tenor. Esquire magazine recently hailed him as "the greatest singer of theater music we have today."

Patinkin's first album was a critical success, including such classics as "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" and "Me and My Shadow." A strict perfectionist, Patinkin claims it took him years to master his material. "If it wasn't perfect, I'd kill myself," he says, joking. "I always have to work at getting out of my own way."

Mandy Patinkin

Donna Mills

■ TV's troublemaker

This summer Donna Mills gave fans of Knots Landing a shock when she announced she was leaving the popular nighttime soap. (Mills is featured in the miniseries Alice in Wonderland; see page 59.)

"I had reached a point where I needed new roles and challenges," Mills says. She admits however, that she loved her role as TV's number-one home-wrecker. "I liked Abby because her main purpose on the show was to stir up trouble."

Mills's character was originally written as "sappy and sympathetic." That was until Mills charged into the producer's office exclaiming, "I can't take this anymore—she's boring!" With various projects including a TV movie in the works, Mills's new career out of the Landing lime-light promises to be anything but boring.

Timothy Hutton

Kelly McGillis

■ Heavenly Hutton

I was pleased that in the film, heaven wasn't this place with smoke and billowing clouds and angels," says Timothy Hutton. "It was more like a pool hall and bar with every great beer you've ever had." The film Hutton is referring to is Made in Heaven, premiering on The Disney Channel in November.

In Made in Heaven Hutton plays a "ghost" caught in a heavenly romance. Does Hutton believe in the supernatural? "I keep an open mind about it. It allows me to be optimistic about my afterlife."

■ A real workaholic

Also starring in Made in Heaven is Kelly McGillis, the California actress with earthly talents and celestial looks. Says McGillis of her co-star Tim Hutton, "I really liked working with him. He kept me on my toes with his spontaneity."

McGillis grew up in a middle class family attending "all the right schools, eating all the right things," she says. "But I always kept it askew by doing something abnormal." That "abnormality" turned into a career in acting.

Since her debut as Tom Conti's love interest in Reuben, Reuben—and her appearance in Top Gun—McGillis has literally had to turn projects away. And even when she isn't working on a film, she's working on something. "I suffer from the great American work ethic," McGillis claims. "I don't know what to do with myself when I'm not employed."

■ A national treasure

One of Lucille Ball's most memorable scenes from the I Love Lucy show was in an episode featuring William Holden. "I was disguised in a putty nose so he wouldn't recognize me," Ball recalled in an interview. "I lit a cigarette and the end of my nose caught on fire, so I put it out in a cup of coffee! The audience was hysterical, but not nearly as hysterical as I was—it was all an accident!"

The knack for spontaneous humor was one of Ball's greatest gifts, a talent also brought to light in the 1950 comedy Fancy Pants (premiering in November on The Disney Channel). In the film, Ball plays a wacky American who brings home an English actor (one Bob Hope) to work as the family butler.

This summer the First Lady of television was posthumously awarded the Medal of Freedom. The award is the nation's highest civilian honor—and worthy recognition for the actress President Bush described as "a national treasure."

Lucille Ball

Elizabeth Taylor

■ Taylor's true passion

Last spring at a star-studded tribute to Elizabeth Taylor a giggled, crazy man in a leather jacket zoomed onstage riding a red Harley-Davidson. That crazy man was millionaire-publisher Malcolm Forbes—and the motorcycle was a gift for his beloved Liz. (Taylor can be seen on The Disney Channel in National Velvet.)

In the past months Taylor has been spotted around the world with the famed tycoon. As of yet, there are no wedding plans. Taylor's also been in the spotlight for another reason—her charity work. In her career she's raised millions of dollars for a variety of causes. Her most recent work has been as Chairperson of the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

"If we don't demand the best of ourselves, who will?" Taylor commented at a recent charity event. "We must strive to remember that we are all human beings. We must give of ourselves a compassion, a commitment and our love."

ARCHIVES

Dave Smith, The Walt Disney Company archivist, answers questions about the company's history and its film productions.

Why did Walt Disney stop making short cartoons in the 1950s?

—R.G., Kansas City, MO

Disney produced about 450 short cartoons during the 30-year period that they were popular in movie theaters. By the mid-to-late 1950s, cartoons got too expensive to produce, and the theaters, which had switched to double features, were no longer buying cartoons or other short subjects such as newsreels and travelogues. Today, with many theaters back to showing single features, there may be a place for cartoons again. Disney's first experiment, Tummy Trouble, released with Honey, I Shrunk the Kids, was a big success.

In the movie Summer Magic, the brother, Peter, is played by Jimmy Mathers. Is he any relation to Jerry Mathers of Leave It to Beaver?

—S.W., Battle Creek, MI

Jimmy Mathers was Jerry Mathers's younger brother. He had appeared in a 1961-62 CBS situation comedy called Ichabod and Me.

On one episode of Walt Disney Presents, Walt Disney remarked that he planned to do a feature length cartoon on "Hiawatha." Was that film ever made?

—R.L., Johnson City, TN

The only film Walt Disney ever completed on the "Hiawatha" story was the 1937 Silly Symphony cartoon, Little Hiawatha. While story work on a Hiawatha feature proceeded for several years, the story never satisfied Walt, so the idea was shelved and the movie never made. Other tales planned for animated feature treatment that never made it past the story stage include "Chanticleer" and Cervantes's Don Quixote.

Where did Disney film the firehouse that was used in Herbie Rides Again?

—K.H., Louisville, KY

The firehouse featured in Herbie Rides Again was built on the backlot of the Disney Studio in Burbank. Movie magic did all the rest: The street scenes of San Francisco were matted in around the firehouse.

I was delighted to hear that Disney will be opening Disney Stores, and was wondering if I could get a franchise for one?

—P.P., Everett, WA

There have been Disney Stores in major malls throughout the country ever since the first one opened in the Glendale (California) Galleria in 1987. The stores have proved to be extremely popular and successful. The 40-odd stores now open nationwide are all operated by The Walt Disney Company; they are not franchises.

As a Robin Hood fan, I have heard that there was a Mickey Mouse newspaper comic strip about the famous outlaw. Can you tell me when it appeared?

—P.L., North Hollywood, CA

Besides the 1952 live-action feature The Story of Robin Hood and His Merrie Men (see page 45) and the animated feature Robin Hood (1973), there was a Robin Hood story that appeared in the Sunday newspaper comic pages, beginning April 26, 1936, and running until October 4.

Many collectors feel this was Mickey's finest Sunday adventure. Called "Mickey Mouse Adventures with Robin Hood," the strip was later reprinted in Walt Disney's Comics and Stories in 1941, and now can be seen in the book Mickey Mouse in Color (Pantheon, 1988). In the story, Mickey is accidentally miniaturized (Honey, I shrunk the Mouse??) and he takes refuge in a Robin Hood book, where he joins Robin's band.

DISNEY CHANNEL TRIVIA

■ Almost Angels (see page 59) is one of several motion pictures made by Walt Disney in the 1960s that used authentic locales. The story of the Vienna Boys Choir was released in Europe as Born to Sing.

■ The "Blue Bayou" segment of Make Mine Music (see page 51) was originally made to be a part of Fantasia, using Debussy's "Clair de Lune." But when Fantasia proved to be too long, the segment was shelved until a place was found for it in Make Mine Music six years later. Since this film features more contemporary music, a new song was substituted for the Debussy.

■ Mickey's Christmas Carol (see page 61), released in 1983, was the first Mickey Mouse cartoon made in 30 years. The previous one had been The Simple Things in 1953.

For much of 1936, the comic strip "Mickey Mouse Adventures with Robin Hood" was a staple of the Sunday funny papers. In the comic, a miniaturized Mickey took refuge in a book about Robin Hood—and ended up joining Robin and his Merrie Men of Sherwood Forest.

■ Baby's first holiday season

By Gretchen Haight

The picture of Baby's first holidays is bright in our minds. It captures everything warm and wonderful we feel about the season. But there are also the snapshots that never get into the family album, the ones of the child frightened and bewildered, overdressed in uncomfortable clothes, being passed among a sea of unfamiliar adults or sitting on the floor drowning in packaging. The infant or toddler who is the center of attention may be upset as well as excited by what's going on around him.

There's a definite increase in accidents, illnesses, and emotional problems during the holidays, according to Dr. Gwen Huffer, M.D., a pediatrician in the Los Angeles area. Children experience changes in routine; they sometimes have to give up their rooms to visitors; or they travel and sleep in a strange location away from home. "The most frequent complaints from parents are about night waking, separation anxiety and temper tantrums," Huffer says. She offers the following safety and health suggestions:

1) Maintain normal routines of healthful eating, exercise, relax-

■ How to pack the perfect lunch

By Barbara Bronson Gray

Some things your mother never taught you.

Because most school children don't brush their teeth while they're at school, what parents put in their children's lunches will directly affect their kids' chances of getting cavities. Parents grew up hearing that sugar was bad for their teeth, and it is. Bacteria in the mouth feed on sugar, creating acids which eventually break down tooth enamel and allow bacteria to invade the tooth. But many parents are not aware of the hidden dental dangers of other foods.

New research has revealed a host of foods that help fight tooth decay, and others—which include such natural foods as raisins, granola bars and bananas—that actually promote plaque and cavities.

Not only does sugar cause cavities, carbohydrates can do so as well, says Christine Dumas, D.D.S., Assistant Clinical Professor of Dentistry at the University of Southern California and a consumer advisor for the American Dental Association. "Carbohydrates are broken down in your mouth into sugars ...so they can be just as bad for your teeth as sugar."

The answer, says Dumas, isn't to avoid packing any foods into the school lunch that contain sugar or carbohydrates, but rather to be sure to include some foods that will help fight tooth decay, and to learn how to make intelligent choices between different foods that are popular with children.

Aged cheeses, such as swiss and cheddar, actually help counteract the acids in the mouth, Dumas says. Opt for milk over fruit juice, since fruit juices have as much sugar as do soft drinks. A chocolate peanut bar, she says, is better than raisins or a fruit roll-up, "because there is something in the milk-chocolate coating, coupled with the nuts, that protects the teeth, whereas the fruit roll-up and the raisins create a sticky sugar coating on the teeth." Corn chips, peanuts and sugarless gum are some of the most tooth-friendly snacks around, she says, since they'll help counteract mouth acids that invite decay. Because bread is a soon-to-be-sugar carbohydrate, Dumas suggests that parents consider omitting the typical sandwich and pack something like sliced pepperoni, cheese, celery sticks and sliced carrots. Include a straw, she suggests, to limit the contact of any beverage with the teeth.

Once parents know how to pack the perfect lunch, they should explain their choices to their children, says Dumas. "Faced with decent options, if kids know what's best for them, they'll usually make the right choice."

■ First Holiday

ation and sleep, for parents as well as the child, as much as possible. But, on the other hand, don't expect that the holidays will be perfect. If you anticipate a certain amount of disruption in a child's sleep, then you won't be so upset when it happens.

Continue to spend five or 10 minutes of uninterrupted time with your child, doing something you both enjoy. This is particularly helpful at transition times, such as going from play to mealtime or to bedtime.

2) Tell an infant or toddler a few hours ahead of time what's going to happen, such as "grandma's going to be here today." Even when an infant doesn't know the words, he'll register your tone of voice and feeling, and that helps him adjust. A three-year-old can be told about plans a few days in advance.

3) "By the time a child is one year old, he or she can open presents pretty well," Huffer says. "Let the child play with the present after he opens it, before he goes on to the next gift. If an infant watches older kids, he may mimic them and feel overwhelmed. You may want to tuck presents away for him later."

4) Pay attention to safety. Your child continues to develop right through the holiday time, and may surprise you by suddenly crawling toward a guest's purse and getting into a non-child-proofed bottle of pills, or toddling into the corner of a table.

Other safety suggestions include: If traveling, arrange for a car seat at your destination. Protect your child from falls from unfamiliar beds and chairs. Tie the Christmas tree in two directions. Look out for the tablecloths; this may be the year for place mats. Also, have someone else hold your child if you're drinking a hot liquid.

A no-choke testing tube can be a helpful device to have with you. Sold in many baby departments, it measures objects that are unsafe to swallow for children under three. Anything—perhaps nuts and hard candies on the table—that falls easily through the tube is small enough to be trouble for a toddler.

5) Health considerations have mainly to do with not spreading viruses. "We catch cold with our hands," says Huffer, "so until washed, keep hands away from eyes and nose. Viruses actually spread more through the eyes and nose."

With regard to allergies, check with your child's doctor about whether there are any foods to be avoided during the holidays.

6) In making plans, say yes only to those activities which will be fun and for which you have the energy. "It's a good time to practice saying no to things you don't want to do," says Huffer. Start preparations, such as shopping and cooking, earlier than you did before you had an infant, so you can allow time to relax with your child. And anticipate what your child will be doing while you're doing something else.

7) Encourage relatives and friends to let the child take the lead in making new friends. "Up to five or six months old, babies are pretty social," Huffer says, "but after that, it's better to let the child take the lead."

8) Find ways for children, even babies, to participate in the goings on, but make sure it's at their own level. Infants love to be near you and hear you describe what you're doing. A child over five months old can hold a ball of dough or a bell or ball. A one-year-old can poke holes in dough or scribble with crayons.

Infants catch the tone of the festivities; they respond to the gay, hopeful atmosphere around them. They also react to their immediate surroundings. "The most important thing you can do is to look at what's going on through your youngster's eyes," Huffer advises. It's the best way to insure the child enjoys his first experience of holiday cheer.

Emotions

■ When personalities clash

By Barbara Bronson Gray

What do you do when you realize that you are constantly clashing with your child? What happens when an athletic parent finds his child prefers to relax quietly listening to music, or an assertive child is paired with a more withdrawn parent?

Such problems occur when there isn't a "good fit" between the personality of the parent and the temperament of the child, according to Dr. G. Pirooz Sholevar, Professor and Director of the Division of Child, Adolescent and Family Psychiatry at Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia. Frequently parent-child clashes are noticed most when the two have opposite traits, and the differences are often disappointing to a parent.

"Parents often see a child [who differs from them] as a troublemaker, and then the child may see himself as a 'bad child,'" says Sholevar. "But the same child in another setting may be seen differently."

A clash may start early in life, says Sholevar, and by preschool age, parents may be aware of tension with the child. Frequently, the bad-fit relationship shows up under stress, such as when the child needs comforting, and the parent, reacting to something in the way the child expresses the frustration—crying, (Continued on next page)

FYI

■ Day care centers and the risk of infections

For working parents who feel they are losing sleep—and time at work—because of their infants' repeated illnesses, there's some interesting news.

Researchers, publishing in the Journal of Pediatrics, looked at infants in a variety of child care arrangements: home care, group care (two to six children) and day care (seven or more children). Not surprisingly, they found that children in home care had fewer infections than children in day care, and those in group care or day care were more likely than children in home care to experience repeated respiratory infections and other illnesses.

The good news is that there is evidence to suggest that the infant who experiences these illnesses early in his life may develop protective immunity—an immunity that will serve him well later in preschool or early elementary school years.

whining, or a temper tantrum, for instance—creates more intense frustration for the child.

The clash takes on additional complexity when two parents have different temperaments, and the child's personality is linked closely to one parent. This happens, for example, when an outgoing and cheerful mother finds herself with a self-absorbed son and a quiet husband.

For parents who experience a clash but are not sure what to do about the tension, Dr. Sholevar offers some advice. First, he says, know that there's a wide range of variation in normal development and behavior. The young intellectual who does nothing but compute math problems for hours on end is just as normal as the baseball star who can't leave the diamond.

Parents should make an effort to know themselves, to identify their own personality traits and to understand their child's temperament, Dr. Sholevar says. He also urges parents to notice how and when they stray from their own typical personality patterns. Know that the child notices, for example—even if the parent is unaware—that the constantly dieting mother sometimes delights in a late evening ice cream binge. Awareness will help smooth the relationship.

Parents should also be alert to ways in which their spouses may trigger reactions that affect the child. If one parent is anxious to leave for an errand and the other has a relaxed view of the day's activities, the slow-moving child will certainly find a friend in the slow-moving parent. It's up to the parents to help each other to modify behavior, says Sholevar, without allowing the child to become a pawn in the process.

Books

■ Cookbooks for kids

Within the past few years, a number of cookbooks for children have appeared in bookstores. If your child is a beginner, make sure that the cookbook you buy has safety tips at the beginning and spend some time going over them together. Some tips—such as turning pot handles to the center of the stove—you might not think of.

Cookbooks with safety tips:

• The Just for Kids Cookbook, by Betty Malisow Potter (New Boundary Designs, Inc., $7.95)

This is probably the most complete and easy to follow of the cookbooks available. Includes up-front sections: Helpful Hints, Play It Safe, and Cooking Dictionary. (If not available at your local bookstore, it can be ordered from New Boundary Designs, Inc., 1453 Park Rd., Chanhassen, MN 55317. Add $1.00 to the cost of the book for postage and handling.)

• Kids Cooking, by Vicki Lansky (Scholastic Inc., $4.95)

• Fisher-Price Fun with Food Cookbook, by Lisa deMauro (Marvel Books, $3.95)

A gift book:

• The Fun of Cooking, by Jill Krementz (Knopf, $18.95)

It's not a basic cookbook, but The Fun of Cooking is, indeed, fun, with photographs of real kids and words from them about cooking their favorite foods.

THE SCIENCE PROJECT

It was Wednesday morning at Mountain High School. Kids were just starting to arrive in the front court. Bridget and Keith came in early that day to finish up their science project before class.

"If only I could get this formula to react," Keith said, staring at the bubbling beaker.

"The only reaction we're going to get is a D on this project," Bridget replied. "We were crazy to think we could actually invent a vanishing potion."

"I just don't get it," Keith said with frustration. "We've tried everything—oxygen, heat, even hydroxybutyric acid. Mr. Millman's going to be here any minute. Face it, we're history."

"The only thing we haven't added is soda," Bridget laughed, trying to cheer Keith up. As a joke, she grabbed a half empty can of soda and poured it into the beaker.

The formula quickly turned green and began to bubble over the sides. Suddenly it spilled all over Keith's hands.

"Keith!" Bridget shrieked. "Your hands are starting to disappear!"

DISNEY NIGHT TIME

Every evening at 9:00 p.m., The Disney Channel presents a distinctive mix of entertainment for adults.

■ Garrison Keillor's Lake Wobegon Loyalty Days

Garrison Keillor fans take note: the Bard of Lake Wobegon returns to The Disney Channel on November 5 with a new special for Sunday Night Showcase. Entitled Lake Wobegon Loyalty Days, the program features Keillor in an appearance with the the Minneapolis Philharmonic Orchestra. It's "A Recital For Mixed Baritone and Orchestra." One segment of the special, "A Young Lutheran's Guide to the Orchestra," is reminiscent of composer Benjamin Britten's acclaimed A Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra.

But where Britten introduced young people to the instruments that compose a symphony orchestra, Keillor—as one might expect—takes a different tack, one that illustrates his down-home "Wobegon roots." For Keillor, the question at hand is what instrument in the orchestra does a fine, upstanding young Lutheran choose to play? In addition to "A Young Lutheran's Guide to the Orchestra," the special also includes Keillor's latest Wobegon monologue. Some other highlights: Keillor dressed in the costume of Lake Wobegon's renowned "Sons of Knute Lodge" while singing their "Homage March," and a duet with Keillor and piccolo player Adele Lorraine in which the two perform a blues rendition of "Jesus Loves Me." Philip Brunelle conducts the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

■ Mystery Night

Is Agatha Christie one of the finest writers of the 20th century? Is Sherlock Holmes the most recognizable character in all of literature? And was there any film director who knew more about suspense—or just plain screaming terror—than Alfred Hitchcock?

Beginning in January, Disney Night Time adds a new dimension to the week with "Mystery Night." Every Tuesday evening at 9:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time), "Mystery Night" presents the finest in mysteries—from classic cinema to recent favorites. It's a must for those who like mystery, suspense, and what Raymond Chandler called "the simple art of murder." And psst—the butler didn't do it.

■ How to make a "Splash" in Hollywood

Say Tom Hanks, and people automatically think of Big and Turner & Hooch. Daryl Hannah was last seen with Michael Douglas in Wall Street. John Candy had a hit this past summer in John Hughes's Uncle Buck. Ron Howard demonstrated his unfailing comedic touch by directing Parenthood.

The names all share something in common: they made their Hollywood "splash" courtesy of Howard's first hit feature, Splash, which airs on Disney Night Time in November and December. The film is Howard's whimsical and comic telling of a fish story: beautiful young mermaid meets handsome young man.

Splash presented Howard the director with problems he hadn't faced in his first three movies: since Hannah was a mermaid, extensive scenes had to be filmed underwater. As a result, the director found himself literally in over his head. "Communication was the biggest problem," he recalls. "We worked out a system of hand signals and had a special undersea booth that we could meet in."

Of course, Howard's success as a director has a firm base: his own career as a "juvenile" actor. (Remember The Andy Griffith Show and, later, Happy Days?) "Ninety-seven percent of what I know about directing, I learned from acting," Howard says. "It's more or less by osmosis. I learned what made a scene work, and that's what a movie is, a collection of scenes.

"I like offbeat stories and quirky characters," Howard continues. "But my theory is that you have to make the characters and their situations as credible and honest as they can be. You've got to earn the right to do the incredible thing. You've got to draw people in through something they can relate to."

Howard—and his collaborators—did just that in Splash. It's a sparkling comic performances.

Nat "King" Cole

■ Miscellaneous screening notes

Sunday Night Showcase is proud to present a special encore of the Emmy-nominated documentary The Unforgettable Nat "King" Cole. A brilliant jazz pianist, Cole found international success and fame as a singer. The special features reminiscences from musical greats as well as family memories from Natalie Cole.

Before Elvis, if you said "The King" you were describing the greatest matinee idol of all time, Clark Gable. Disney Night Time viewers can see Gable and Grace Kelly and Ava Gardner in John Ford's classic Mogambo. Gable is the great white hunter, Kelly is the prim and proper ice maiden—for a short time, that is—and la Gardner is the sultry show girl. It's quite a safari when that triangle gets going.

Ron Howard directs a scene from Splash, his first film to hit big.

ROBERT URICH

By Alexandra Pollyea

There are choices you can make. And then there are choices you have to make. Robert Ulrich knows the difference. When Ulrich was in his early 20s, there were many career choices open to him. An accomplished athlete—captain of both his high school football and basketball teams and recipient of a four-year football scholarship to Florida State University—Ulrich could have crafted a successful career in coaching or sports administration. With a B.A. in radio and television communications and an M.A. from Michigan State University, Ulrich could easily have continued along the corporate path he toed when he accepted work as a sales account executive at station WGN Chicago. But when Ulrich sized up the possibilities in his future, the choice was simple. Pursuing a career in acting, Ulrich recalls, “was the easiest decision to make in the world because it was something I had to do. I’d thought about acting forever—and from the time I was in high school, I was in plays—but coming from a little steel town in Ohio, it wasn’t something I told anybody. I didn’t go around saying, ‘Hey, I’m going to be an artist.’”

Having made his choice to go into acting, Ulrich never looked back. Sure, there were the early, lean years while he practiced his craft at Chicago’s Ivanhoe and Arlington Park Theatres, years during which family and friends alike in his Toronto, Ohio hometown wondered if he was ever going to get a “real” job. Now, after 18 years in show business, Ulrich has an impressive roster of television and movie roles to his credit. Robert Ulrich is a “name,” a “heavyweight,” courted by producers and studios who hope he can add that intangible sparkle that makes a project a hit.

The more things change, then, the more they remain the same: in his professional life, Robert Ulrich is back to sifting projects he “can do” from projects he feels he “has to do.” Which brings up the Disney Channel Premiere Film Spooner. (A world television premiere, Spooner debuts on The Disney Channel on Saturday, December 2, at 7:00 p.m., Eastern/Pacific time.) In Spooner, directed by Australian George Miller of Man From Snowy River fame, Ulrich plays an escaped forger, Michael Gillette, aka Harry Spooner, who finds work teaching English and coaching wrestling at a small-town high school. Spooner tries to make a difference in the life of a seemingly no-good bully of a kid and falls in love with a fellow teacher—all the while trying to keep out of sight of pursuing lawmen. With all the television and film scripts that cross his desk, what drew Ulrich to the role?

In this hard driving—and inspirational—film, Robert Ulrich is Harry Spooner, a small town high school English teacher. Spooner is actually Michael Gillette, an escaped forger who has assumed the identity of Harry Spooner. In his new “life,” Spooner manages to inspire the wrestling team he coaches—including one young bully—and finds romance as well. This Disney Channel Premiere Film debuts on Saturday, December 2, at 7:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time). “You want to do something that your kids can watch,” Ulrich says of the movie, “something the family can watch when they all sit down together.”

Not surprisingly, there were several reasons. The quality of the story and writing was an important factor. “Whether it’s film or television, scripts which are good jump out at you,” Ulrich says. “The Disney people sent Spooner to me and I said yes to the project immediately.” Ulrich was also attracted to Spooner because “you want to do something that your kids can watch, something the family can watch when they all sit down together.” But there were other considerations for taking on Spooner as well, considerations that had to do with Ulrich’s concern of widening his repertoire of roles as an actor.

“So often I’ve been asked to play these clear-cut heroic types who always make the correct physical and moral choices,” Ulrich explains. “With Spooner, I got a chance to play somebody who had more gray areas to his character. Spooner is not a bad guy; he just got in the habit of forging information, like a white-collar criminal. It started in college when some scholarships were suspended, and Spooner thought it was unfair that some of his classmates were not going to be able to finish their education. So he doctored some checks, his friends stayed in school, and of course he got caught.”

If Spooner represents somewhat of a departure for Ulrich, the role calls for him to draw on the athletic experience that has been of invaluable aid in playing so many physically demanding roles. “Given all the coaching that I’ve had in my days and all the organized sports I’ve played, I pretty much had the coach aspect of the part pegged,” Ulrich says. “The only difficult thing was learning to wrestle. To have some 250-pound seventeen-year-old put you in a neck lock—well, time out! I had to learn to throw these guys and do it with dispatch. You’ve got your whole body sailing through the air and falling on a mat at age 42.”

As in the past, Ulrich insisted on doing all his own stunts if at all possible. “I just felt I could do it,” Ulrich says with quiet pride. “I picked it up in two or three days. I don’t think it was something that a stuntman could have done for me. I mean, you could always do that and cheat, but it’s not as convincing. It’s not that I personally like to go hurtling through the air and crashing to the concrete.”

In the course of filming another project, Ulrich explains, he separated part of his shoulder and wrecked his back for a while. “I look at scripts a little more closely now. I’m going to try to do some comedies,” he vows. And yet, Ulrich finds himself drawn back to physical challenges both on and off the screen. “Every time I think I’m done with it or that I can’t do it any more, I’ll find some reason to test myself. It really is a confidence builder. I just came back from two weeks in the Colorado Rockies. My son and I packed in with horses and mules for two days across the Continental Divide. I didn’t know if my back could take it after a day on a horse fording streams and climbing up mountain sides. I ended up feeling great and I thought, I just need to do more.” Ulrich laughs, “And that’s probably what puts people in an early grave.”

Joking aside, Ulrich is committed to doing more projects that, like Spooner, invigorate him professionally and make him feel good about his craft. One such project is American Dreamer, a series he’s developing with Gary David Goldberg of Family Ties fame. It’s the story of a man in contemporary midwestern America trying to rekindle the summer simplicity of his youth.

Eighteen years ago, Robert Ulrich chose to forego a “real” career in favor of the acting life. It was a decision he had to make. As his performance in Spooner demonstrates, there was never any doubt that Ulrich chose the right path. □

THE MAKING OF The Little Mermaid

Alyssa Milano looks at the making of Disney's first animated fairy tale since Sleeping Beauty.

Cinderella, Sleeping Beauty, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs—these Disney fairy tales are imbedded in our minds as some of the most memorable films from childhood. For the past several years, The Walt Disney Studios have been toiling away at the creation of their first animated fairy tale since Sleeping Beauty in 1959. The result is The Little Mermaid, scheduled for release on November 17. The Disney Channel was on hand to capture the creation of this extraordinary film from beginning to end for an exclusive special, The Making of The Little Mermaid (premiering November 17, at 8:30 p.m., Eastern/Pacific time).

Who better to host The Making of the Little Mermaid than Alyssa Milano, the young actress who served as one of the inspirations for the mermaid character. During the special, Milano takes subscribers to the animation studios, introduces the actors who provided the characters with their voices, and finds out what sets The Little Mermaid apart from previous Disney animated classics.

Based on the tale by Hans Christian Andersen, The Little Mermaid is the story of Ariel, a 16-year-old mermaid who longs to be human. Her father Triton, the king of the sea, refuses to grant her wish. Animator Glen Keane comments on the story's appeal: "What makes the picture real is Ariel's struggle to be free . . . and that her father has to let her be free, let her grow up."

"In this picture the girl, the heroine, is more real and identifiable than any other heroine we've done," Keane continues. To make Ariel believable, the animators also relied on Jodi Benson, the actress who provided the voice for Ariel. In fact, the characters' voices were recorded before any animation was started.

Benson faced the formidable task of making Ariel sound like she was underwater. To create a submarine atmosphere the technicians turned off all the lights and recorded her voice in complete darkness. Christopher Barnes (Day by Day), who plays the human prince Ariel falls in love with, was also challenged with creating a believable voice—without ever having seen the character. "I realized the film was at that moment . . . one percent technical and ninety-nine percent imagination. It was my job to bring everything to life."

The greatest challenge for the animators was to create an undersea world—a world which was constantly in motion. Underwater animation "is a difficult proposition because there are no holds . . . the hair continues to drift . . . you can't feel that something isn't floating," say John Musker and Ron Clements, artists who worked on the project. They studied Pinocchio and other films for their use of bubbles and light patterns to develop a kinetic marine world.

Another element that helped the animators was the music created for the film. Disney brought in Howard Ashman and Alan Menken, creators of the hit musical The Little Shop of Horrors, to write the songs for The Little Mermaid. Animator Donald Towns comments on the music: "It allows you to push the color as far as you want to push it. [The music] builds to a high point . . . and we see it, not just hear it."

Music, models, voices, storyboards—they're all part of the complicated process behind producing an animated film. In The Making of the Little Mermaid subscribers get an incredible look at the story from conception to creation—and discover why animator Glen Keane describes The Little Mermaid as "different from any fairy tale Disney's ever made in the past." □

That Tireless, Traveling Man, MR. HOPE

Noted critic and author Charles Champlin chats with Bob Hope, the star of a new Disney Night Time special,
A Conversation with Bob Hope.

At the vigorous age of 86, Bob Hope not only doesn't pause in his ceaseless quest for our laughter, he doesn't even slow down.

On a recent afternoon when he was briefly between trips and relaxing—sort of—at his home in Toluca Lake, California, a memento-filled establishment his friends refer to as The Winter Palace, Hope told a visitor, “I just did four days in Appleton, Wisconsin (a benefit to raise money for the library). I told ‘em, ‘I started in vaudeville, then went to radio, Broadway, pictures, television, and now I’ve ended up in Appleton. Where did I go wrong?’ They loved it. Beautiful place, beautiful people.”

Hope is on the road, or more exactly in the air in his own jet, much of the time, doing benefits and one-night appearances, including a much-heralded teaming in Madison Square Garden with another tireless trouper, 93-year-old George Burns. Hope, Burns and Betty White also starred at the gala opening of the Disney-MGM Studios Theme Park in Florida, where Hope taped A Conversation with Bob Hope, the fourth in a series of specials on The Disney Channel featuring show business legends. (A Conversation With Bob Hope premieres November 26 at 9:00 p.m., Eastern/Pacific time.)

Hope dipped into his extraordinary bag of memories to create a moment during the Florida taping. “I was coming home from Europe on the liner United States in 1950,” Hope was remembering the other afternoon. “Gloria de Haven was on board and we did a little show every day. I’d do a two or three minute monologue and then we’d take questions from the audience. One guy yelled out from the back, ‘Does a pig’s tail curl clockwise or counter-clockwise?’ I said, ‘We’ll know when you leave.’ It brought the house down. My agent was with me in Florida and I set him up to ask the same question. I think he was scared to death, but I called on him and he asked it, and it worked again. Big laugh.”

Hope has been chasing—and getting—the big laughs for more than 60 years, ever since the swift demise of the career of a boxer named Packy East. Hope was born Leslie Townes Hope in England but his family emigrated to Cleveland, Ohio, when he was four. A buddy with whom Hope boxed at the YMCA in Cleveland registered for the state amateur finals as Packy West. As a joke Hope secretly registered as Packy East.

“My pal Whitey Jennings, who was Packy West, lost his first fight. I won mine, because the kid I was fighting looked at his corner every time I hit him, which left him open for another punch.” But he only lasted two rounds in his next fight. “That guy knocked me right into dancing school,” Hope says.

The dancing school was no joke. Hope’s mother had been a concert singer in Wales and Hope inherited a fine, strong voice, which suggested a singing-dancing career. Another Hope pal from the neighborhood at 105th and Euclid Avenue was taking dancing lessons and Hope signed up, too. He did well, and for a while he even ran the school. He found a dancing partner, Mildred Rosequist, who was also a girlfriend, and they developed an act which he proposed they take on the road. “But her mother insisted on seeing the act first, and when she did, she said, 'You're not taking my daughter on the road with that act.'

"Mildred later married a policeman and lived in San Diego. She came to Burbank to watch me tape one of the specials once and she said, 'Bob, if Mother were here today I'd slap her in the mouth.'"

Bob also hung around the Alhambra Pool Hall and when he got one of his first vaudeville gigs, at the nearby Alhambra Theatre, he says, "My pals all came and sat in the front row. When I walked on they brought out newspapers and started reading them."

It was a rocky start, but vaudeville became a priceless schooling in timing, interpreting audiences, ad-libbing, and mugging. "People are always asking me, where are all the young comedians going to come from," Hope says. "I've always said, it's tough, because they don't have vaudeville as a place where they can be bad, and learn to be good. Now, of course, there's a Comedy Store on every corner, but it's still not vaudeville."

"When you did three a day, which you did unless you were a headliner, you did the supper show, with 20 or 30 people in the audience. Believe me, that taught you to ad-lib."

Hope's first vaudeville breaks were in so-called tab shows, condensed musical revues that were booked out of Springfield, Ohio. He did everything from juveniles to blackface, and still remembers an appearance in Braddock, Pennsylvania, when in his naivete he used grease instead of cork. "I was in the dressing room until two in the morning, trying to get the stuff off." Once a bit later he missed his bus to the theater and didn't have time to put on the blackface. A booking agent was in the audience and told Hope afterwards, "Don't ever wear blackface again. You've got a face that saves weak jokes."

"Can you imagine how many hours of work that guy saved me?" Hope asks, laughing. It was also a learning experience, as Hope realized the values of mugging as a way of covering for a joke that doesn't quite work. What might be called his physical and his verbal double-takes at failed jokes became in fact as much a trademark as his bad luck with beautiful women or his lack of success in winning Oscars.

In the mid-20s, Hope says, "I starved around Cleveland, then I went to Detroit. I got $10 a show there, and not many shows either. I was still Lester Hope. I decided to try Chicago, and I told myself I was going to make it there or quit. I can remember looking out of my hotel room and watching the people eating in Henrici's, where I couldn't afford to eat."

But a friendly agent got him a booking as emcee at a suburban theater, and that led to a six-month stint at another theater which combined movies with a stage show. "I borrowed jokes from everybody. I'd ask the other acts if they had material I could use. I read College Humor." Some of the jokes remain in mind, like the Scotsman who was married in the backyard so his chickens would get the rice, and the same Scotsman who killed his wife because he found she'd purchased vanishing cream.

"After the six months," Hope says, "I was ready. I was loaded for bear." He had become Bob Hope, because it sounded brisker, and he knew how to edit material and, in general, how to deliver it. Earlier he had had partners. Now he was a single.

There was one lesson left to learn. In San Antonio his jokes, delivered in his fast, brash style, fell flat. He blamed the audiences, but a kindly booking agent, who became a lifelong friend, told him, "These are nice, friendly people, Fancy Pants, but they speak a little slowly down here. Just slow down a little and let 'em hear you." Hope did, and it made all the difference. The nickname Fancy Pants, the booker's allusion to the blue blazer and white flannels which were Hope's stage outfit, was a standing joke between them, and became the title of one of Hope's most successful films, a remake of Ruggles of Red Gap, in which he co-starred with Lucille Ball in 1950.

From Texas, Hope at the end of the 1920s invaded New York with a triumphant vaudeville appearance, on a bill with Leatrice Joy, the wife of matinee idol John Gilbert. Hope came on, announcing that he wasn't John Gilbert, in case anybody wasn't sure. His socko performance led to offers from two major circuits. He chose the lesser-paying offer from Keith-Orpheum because it included bookings at the Palace, the pinnacle of success for any vaudevillian. Those appearances led to the theater: Ballyhoo of 1932 and then Roberta, which established Hope as a musical comedy star. The shows led to movie shorts and to the start of his long career in radio.

Early in the 1930s, MGM brought Hope to California for a screen test but, in a striking display of major studio myopia, Hope wasn't signed. But then director Mitchell Leisen, who was later to do The Big Broadcast of 1938, came to see Hope on Broadway in Follies, in which Hope was introducing "I Can't Get Started With You," singing it to a red-headed chorine named Eve Arden.

At Leisen's urging, Hope got the lead in Big Broadcast, sang "Thanks for the Memory" to Shirley Ross, and has been singing it ever since, with new verses for every occasion. The film and the song launched Hope as a major Hollywood star.

It is quite possible that no one has made so many people laugh over so many years as Bob Hope, or played so many benefits for so many good causes. He is about to celebrate his fortieth year of making television specials, and he continues to do six hours of specials a year. His films, like Fancy Pants and Casanova's Big Night, as well as the classic Road pictures with Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour, keep finding new audiences.

It is clear that Hope, and the world, owe a debt of gratitude to that long-forgotten amateur boxer who flattened Packy East in the second round in Cleveland nearly 70 years ago. □

READY STEADY GO!

The '60s Musical Celebration

By Dave Marsh

Imagine a world in which virtually every day brings new musical surprises. In which the most joyous uptempo shouting and the most lachrymose ballad singing you've ever heard leap out side by side, divided by nothing more than a few seconds of deejay patter. A world in which barriers crumbled so regularly that you couldn't be sure what frenzy to focus on next: Those wisecracking Englishmen in the collarless coats or that cool cat in the white cut-away motoring in from Detroit.

You don't have to imagine that world. Only 25 years ago it really existed. It was called the Sixties. The music that was made then, from Liverpool and London to New York, Detroit, Memphis, and L.A., retains a uniquely captivating presence. It's not just nostalgia. This music remains alive—as you'll see in every episode of Ready Steady Go!

Ready Steady Go! first aired in August 1963 on Britain's commercial network, ITV. It wasn't just the heyday of Beatlemania and the early days of the London beat boom heralded by the Rolling Stones; it was the eve of the Mods vs. Rockers riots at the English seacoast resorts, which launched a nationwide (and then worldwide) style revolution. In producer Vicki Wickham, director Michael Lindsay-Hogg, and presenter Cathy McGowan (if not her succession of male co-hosts), RSG had a core group of young hipsters ready to do for TV what the Beatles had done for music. Today, watching the camera zip in and out of focus, zoom around from the dancers to the stars, and quick-cut among assorted pop images, RSG might seem old hat. But Ready Steady Go! really set the stage for all the rock film and video that followed, from Tommy (the Who were Mod, and therefore Ready Steady Go! staples) to MTV.

"We'd stick to a very rigid booking formula of only using artists we liked," Wickham once said. "Now that I think about it, this was incredibly pretentious of us—but it worked and made Ready Steady Go! the unique pop art show it was and shaped the careers of a heap of acts." Among those who got their start on RSG

were the Rolling Stones, Dusty Springfield (a co-host on some of these episodes), the Animals, the Kinks, and the Moody Blues.

But it wasn't just the music. Proclaiming itself through a succession of blaring theme songs—most prominently, the Who's "Anyway Anyhow Anywhere" and Manfred Mann's "5-4-3-2-1"—and the opening title "THE WEEK-END STARTS HERE," Ready Steady Go! defined what was hip in fashion and dancing for an entire generation of British kids. And over the years, as Mod fashion leaked across the Channel and the Atlantic, the look also penetrated Europe and America. As with American Bandstand, a big part of the attraction was watching the kids in the audience dance, focusing in on their haberdashery and new steps.

Because dancing was the key ingredient, the show's musical taste ranged way beyond British beat and R&B into the real thing, imported from America: RSG captured Otis Redding, Marvin Gaye (the aforementioned cool cat in the white tux), Martha & the Vandellas, Rufus Thomas, Smokey Robinson and the Miracles, and the Supremes, creating a classic compendium of Sixties soul heroes, matched up perfectly with the English acts that idolized them. (The RSG Otis Redding special that also features Eric Burdon singing Sam & Dave's "Hold On I'm Coming"—and holding his own with it—is the best example of such interaction.) "It was the only show in the world I've ever seen that managed a balance between either side of the ocean," said the Who's Pete Townshend.

Because Ready Steady Go! went off the air in 1967, before the scene shifted to the confusions and artifices of psychedelia, it seals off the most crucial segment of the Sixties revolt-into-style even more perfectly. "RSG was instant pop music," according to Wickham. "It was every trend before it happened, and things came and went super fast. It was about youth and their dreams and aspirations and had nothing to do with thinking about tomorrow." The Who's Pete Townshend remembered the show as "insanity and abandon," and when you see the Who's own live performance of "Anyway Anyhow Anywhere" or Jerry Lee Lewis's piano-stomping "Whole Lotta Shakin' Goin' On," you'll see what Townshend means.

Ready Steady Go!'s mania heralded rock's psychedelic era without partaking in it. Part of (especially in a bit about his book, In His Own Write). But RSG was never afraid to tread across boundaries others would have seen as utterly taboo. The single most hilarious and, even after all these years, striking sequence features the Rolling Stones and McGowan lip-synching Sonny and Cher's "I Got You Babe," a marvelous satire of both Sonny and Cher's nascent hippie love protestations and the Stone's own image as ambiguous droogs.

You'll also get a chance to see the Stones' most embarrassing moment on these Ready Steady Go! programs—in a Rolling Stones special. (There's also a Beatles special.) The four RSG specials presented in "Ready Steady Go! The '60s Musical Celebration," especially the ones on the Stones and Redding, are remarkable examples of music television, easily crossing the line from mere period pieces to true samples of pop history. But in a sense, what's most fun and most instructive are the weekly episodes—or what feel like weekly episodes. In fact, the material in each of the 11 half-hours has been assembled from several episodes of RSG, often filmed a couple of years apart. But the editing is so skillful that each flows at least as easily as the originals.

The result is a series you watch with a measure of anticipation. What's next? Motown's Kim Weston singing a song that never reached the chart status it deserved? The vastly underrated British rocker Billy Fury? One of the weedy assortment of pretty boy pre-Beatles English pop singers? Dudley Moore in a bizarre, Pythonesque turn at the piano?

It's that sense of "What's Next?" that made not just Ready Steady Go! but Sixties music so great. As seen here in all its diversity—black and white, British and American, male and female, soul and folk, pop and rock—Sixties music confounded expectations. The music was often magnificent, but even if it wasn't you had to stay tuned, because the next thing you heard could change your life. A quarter of a century later, it still feels the same way. □ what's great about the series was the total innocence of all involved, as when George Harrison once offered a dead serious explanation of how American drive-ins work.

But not always serious. A key element of Ready Steady Go! was its utter irreverence. The most consistently funny appearances come from the Beatles—John Lennon seems to be everywhere, wisecracking off-mike when his mates are being interviewed, superbly deadpan when he's being interrogated himself

I'm not going to make a big thing out of Ben Johnson and steroids," says Bud Greenspan pointedly, referring to one of the most notorious incidents at the 1988 Summer Games in Seoul, South Korea. [Sprinter Johnson was stripped of his gold medal after testing positive for steroid use.] "That's not what the Olympics are about," Greenspan declares. "Guys who break the rules are one percent of the people competing, and they deserve one percent of the coverage—at least in my film."

The film in question is Greenspan's Seoul '88: 16 Days of Glory. A dramatic account of the 1988 Summer Olympics, Seoul '88: 16 Days of Glory receives its world premiere on The Disney Channel on Wednesday, November 29, at 9:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time). Greenspan, the celebrated sports filmmaker who created the official films for the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics and the 1988 Winter Games in Calgary, interrupted a hectic schedule to speak about his latest paean to Olympic glory.

"Our theme is always to present what you did not see at the Olympics," Greenspan continues. "We like to tell stories that take you behind the scenes to reveal the human side of the equation. For us to do a potpourri of 16 days of Olympic competition in two and a half hours and focus only on the results is pointless.

"Our film on Calgary (Calgary '88: 16 Days of Glory, also a world premiere on The Disney Channel) is a case in point. The story of the two Brians (Brian Boitano and Brian Orser) at the ice skating competition—that was great drama that took place offstage. We went backstage because that was where a great story was to be found."

Greenspan uses this patented approach for his film about Seoul. "We cover very famous people," Greenspan observes, "but always through the eyes of someone else. We do the Greg Louganis story—that's a wonderfully dramatic tale—but through the eyes of Sammy Lee, his first coach. For Janet Evans, who won three gold medals, we miked her parents and followed them through Janet's events."

Other dramatic episodes include the triumph of Jackie Joyner-Kersey, as viewed through the prism of her relationship with her coach—and husband—Bob Kersey, as well as segments on American high jumper Louise Ritter and other Olympians who may be less familiar to an American audience.

One such story is that of Soviet swimmer Vladimir Salnikov. "Nobody has ever heard of him," Greenspan crows. "That's a great story—the classic journey. In 1980, Salnikov was the greatest swimmer in the world. But the U.S. boycotted the Moscow Games, so nobody ever heard of Salnikov. In 1984, the Soviets boycotted Los Angeles—and nobody has still heard of Salnikov. Now, in 1988, Salnikov's 28 years old—he's over the hill. But he still goes to Seoul and wins one of the last races of the Olympic swimming competition."

Greenspan believes that his emphasis on telling dramatic stories is the best approach for Olympic coverage. He remains critical of conventional network coverage of the Olympics, the Games at Seoul being a case in point.

"In their desire to give you everything at the Olympics, the networks are like the proverbial kid in a candy store," Greenspan says. "They have a built-in disadvantage to begin with because of commercials. When you have eight commercial interruptions in an hour, and your coverage is switching between four separate events, you can watch Greg Louganis diving, walk into the kitchen, come back and find yourself in the last minute of a volleyball game. It's disorienting.

"The Olympics need to be made mythical and magical. You can't treat them like an everyday news story—if you do, you spend a lot of time on who's taking steroids. It's titillating, but is it right?"

"This is occurring in all forms of electronic communication today," Greenspan observes. "Everybody is interested in how fast they can get news to you. That's fine, but our job, as we see it, is not how fast we can get it to you but how completely we get it to you. And how much we maintain the Olympic traditions. I don't want to focus on someone who takes dope to win a gold medal—what kind of statement does that make to young people?"

"There has to be something mysterious in life," Greenspan reflects. "But now, thanks to electronic communication, we live in a world where the rule is one of literal truth. There are no more heroes, no more great stars, no more great statesmen today. How can there be? Once you achieve that sort of prominence, everyone else fades into the background. Who can stand up to that kind of scrutiny? You'd have to be crazy to put yourself on the line. To me, it's important to maintain the traditions of the Olympics. We spend 100 percent of our time on the 95 percent of the Olympics that is good."

Yet controversy and the Olympics seem made for one another. Indeed, the 1980s have been parlous times. International politics have marred two Summer Games. And every Olympiad seems heralded by political protest and threatened boycotts.

Another perennial concern is whether the Olympic ideals have been lost sight of in the mania for medals. That question came under renewed scrutiny in the United States with the issuance of the Steinbrenner Report to the U.S. Olympic Committee. Conducted after the U.S.'s poor showings in the Calgary Winter Games of 1988, the report seemed to advocate a program of producing gold medal winners.

"That's a difficult subject for me to talk about," Greenspan says frankly, "because George Steinbrenner has always been a big supporter of ours. I respect the man. The reason why what he said has meaning," Greenspan continues, "is because it's a farce and a contradiction to expect U.S. athletes to compete with athletes who have the total support of their government. In effect, what he's saying is that democracy has to catch up with the Soviet Union and the Eastern Europeans."

What is in line for Greenspan following the world premiere of Seoul '88: 16 Days of Glory? He makes a joke: "I used to be bicoastal. Now it seems I'm bicontinental." What with conferences with the International Olympic Committee, and flights to France and Spain, the sites of the 1992 Olympic Games, it seems sure that Greenspan will again be deeply involved in capturing the Olympic vision.

"Remember," he promises about his new film. "It's what you didn't get to see at the Summer Olympics."

Celebrating the 25th Anniversary of Disney's film classic... a Bradford Exchange recommendation

It's hard to believe — 25 years have passed since Walt Disney's magical movie musical first appeared on the screen!

Now, in honor of this screen classic's Silver Anniversary, The Bradford Exchange is pleased to announce the availability of "Mary Poppins," a new limited-edition plate authorized by The Walt Disney Company Board of Review. And like exceptional movie-theme collector's plates that now command hundreds of dollars on the plate market, "Mary Poppins" appears to have what it takes to go up in value after the edition closes.

Not all plates go up in value; some go down. But the edition of "Mary Poppins" is strictly limited to a maximum of 150 firing days, and demand is expected to be strong. So if you wish to obtain this plate at the $29.90 issue price, the time to act is now. To order your plate — fully backed by our one-year money-back guarantee — send no money now, simply complete and mail the coupon at right.

ANIMATION

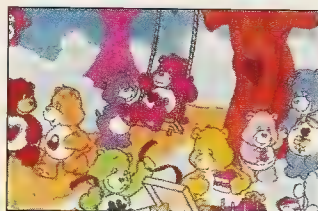

CINDERELLA

In 1950 Walt Disney staked the future of his studio on a film that was to become a beloved animated classic. The timeless tale of a young girl who dreams of going to the prince's ball, Cinderella was entirely filmed in live-action to help guide the animators with their creation of the characters. Those characters are some of Disney's finest. (1:15) Nov. 4, 9, 12, 17, 23, 25 cc

FLUPPY DOGS

Five magical, talking Fluppy dogs enter the lives of a 10-year-old boy and his snobbish neighbor. An animated hour of laughs and adventure. (1:00) Nov. 7, 12, 17, 24; Dec. 7, 12, 18

THE CARE BEARS MOVIE

An evil spirit threatens to spread gloom upon the land unless the Care Bears can stop him with their rainbow beams. (1:15) Nov. 13, 18, 29; Dec. 17, 28

THE TURKEY CAPER

Buttons the bear and Rusty the fox learn about the first Thanksgiving and team up to save the wild turkeys. (0:30) Nov. 1, 5, 10, 13, 18, 23

SPARKY'S MAGIC PIANO

Sparky's an eight-year-old boy who'd rather do anything than play piano—until he has a special music lesson. (0:30) Nov. 2, 4, 9, 13, 18, 27; Dec. 12

THE ADVENTURES OF ICHABOD AND MR. TOAD

This Disney film features two tales: the adventures of Mr. Toad, and Ichabod Crane, who meets the legendary Headless Horseman. (1:07) Nov. 4, 11, 16, 26, 30; Dec. 4, 9, 15

THE PHANTOM TOLLBOOTH

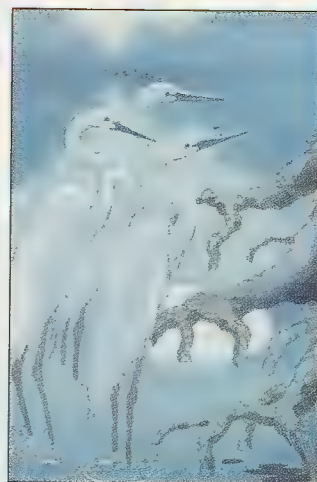

A dog named Tock that goes "tick, tick, tick" accompanies a melancholy boy and a beetle through a magic tollbooth to a land with no rhyme or reason in this Norton Juster tale. (1:30) Nov. 21; Dec. 6, 11, 16, 21, 29

A BOY NAMED CHARLIE BROWN

The Peanuts gang pays tribute to that all-American, ordinary guy, Charlie Brown. Includes Charlie Brown's famous foul-ups on the baseball diamond. (1:19) Nov. 7, 11, 17, 20

THE CHIPMUNK ADVENTURE

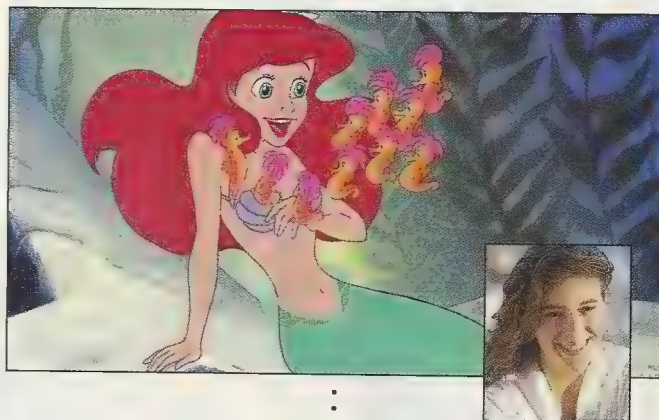

After Dave goes off to Europe, the Chipmunks and Chipettes are challenged to a hot air balloon race around the world by the evil Furstain. (1:16) Nov. 2, 5, 8, 15, 21; Dec. 9

BLUE BAYOU

MAKE MINE MUSIC

Adventure, comedy and romance in the form of animated musical vignettes make this Disney animated classic sparkle. Some of the ten cartoons include "The Martins and the Coys," "Casey at the Bat," "Peter and the Wolf," "Blue Bayou," "Two Silhouettes," and "The Whale Who Wanted to Sing at the Met." (1:14) Nov. 25; Dec. 2, 6, 11, 21, 24, 30

THE MAKING OF THE LITTLE MERMAID

The Little Mermaid, based on the story by Hans Christian Andersen, is the first full-length animated fairy tale produced by the Disney Studios since Sleeping Beauty. Alyssa Milano, who served as an inspiration for The Little Mermaid, explores the process behind creating an animated film. (0:30) Nov. 17, 22, 25; Dec. 1, 7, 11, 17

THANKSGIVING IN THE LAND OF OZ

During Thanksgiving dinner with her family, Dorothy and her little dog Toto are swept up in a balloon and carried to Winkie County, where Tyron the Terrible is threatening the peaceful land of Oz. (0:30) Nov. 7, 12, 15, 18, 20, 23

DISNEY NIGHT TIME

Sunday Night Showcase READY STEADY GO! The '60s Musical Celebration

Program I

The Beatles receive an award for busting U.S. record charts and sing "It Won't Be Long." Also featured are the Rolling Stones, Dusty Springfield, the Dave Clark Five and Martha and the Vandellas. Dec. 3, 14, 30

Program II

The Beach Boys hit London and sing "I Get Around" and "When I Grow Up." The Stones discuss the first book about them and perform "Little Red Rooster." And the Beatles sing "Can't Buy Me Love." Dec. 17, 19, 31

Program III

The Who and "My Generation"; the Beatles judge a picture competition and John scrawls "I Love Elvis"; Marvin Gaye sings "How Sweet It Is (To Be Loved By You)." (1:00) Dec. 31

The Sounds of Motown

A Ready Steady Go! hour special that features the greatest names in Motown: Otis Redding, Marvin Gaye, Diana Ross and the Supremes, Stevie Wonder, Smokey Robinson and the Miracles, Martha and the Vandellas. (1:00) Dec. 10, 18, 31

The Rolling Stones Special

In this Ready Steady Go! special, the Stones perform some of their greatest hits: "Under My Thumb," "I Am Waiting," "Paint It Black," "I Got You Babe" (a Sonny and Cher impersonation), "Got a Good Thing Going," and, of course, "Satisfaction." Dec. 17, 22, 27, 31

The Best of Hollywood

THE DISORDERLY ORDERLY

What happens to a nursing home when one of their orderlies is none other than Jerry Lewis? The answer is wild slapstick and outrageous gags in this zany 1964 Lewis outing. Co-stars Glenda Farrell, Susan Oliver. (1:30) Dec. 4, 14, 26

The Best of Hollywood

WHO'S MINDING THE STORE?

In this 1963 comedy, Jerry Lewis falls for a young beauty (Jill St. John). Her mother (Agnes Moorehead) can't stand the thought of the bumbling Lewis as her son-in-law—so she hires him to work in her store, figuring he will discredit himself. Co-stars Ray Walston and Nancy Kulp. (1:30) Dec. 18, 26

HELP!

The Beatles are pursued by an Eastern cult that practices human sacrifice after Ringo ends up wearing their sacrificial ring. Richard Lester directed; Leo McKern co-stars in the second Beatles movie. (1:30) Dec. 3, 19, 31

The Best of Hollywood TO CATCH A THIEF

Cary Grant is the retired cat burglar in Hitchcock's 1955 comedy. Co-stars Grace Kelly. (1:34) Nov. 20; Dec. 7, 20

The Best of Hollywood

THE NUTTY PROFESSOR

Jerry Lewis is a professor who is transformed into the swinging "Buddy Love" (a takeoff on Dean Martin?) by a potion he invents. Lewis's 1963 masterpiece co-stars Stella Stevens. (1:47) Dec. 11, 17, 26

THE MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY

Cliff Robertson stars in the classic tale of a young soldier whose angry outburst at his court-martial leads him to be exiled from the United States. (1:18) Dec. 27

The Best of Hollywood

IT'S A WONDERFUL LIFE

Frank Capra's 1946 classic about a small-town banker who, when his bank fails on Christmas Eve, contemplates suicide—only to be rescued by an aspiring angel. Stars James Stewart, Donna Reed, Lionel Barrymore. (2:10) Dec. 24, 25

DECEMBER 4 through DECEMBER 10

MICKEY'S CHRISTMAS CAROL

This 1983 Disney version of Dickens's A Christmas Carol stars Mickey as Bob Cratchit, Scrooge McDuck as miserly Scrooge, and Pete, Jiminy Cricket, and Willie the Giant as the three Christmas ghosts. (0:30) Dec. 20, 22, 24, 25

HOLIDAY SPLENDOR

Carol Lawrence is the host as children perform holiday songs from different cultures. (0:30) Dec. 6, 23

YOGI BEAR'S ALL-STAR CHRISTMAS COMEDY CAPER

A group of friends decide to visit Yogi Bear in Jellystone National Park—but unbeknownst to them, Yogi and Boo-Boo have gone to New York, where they befriend a little girl in this animated special. (0:30) Dec. 12, 16, 19, 24, 25

CASPER'S FIRST CHRISTMAS

Casper meets a group of cartoon characters and celebrates his first Christmas with them. (0:30) Dec. 12, 14, 18, 21, 24, 25

THE STINGIEST MAN IN TOWN

Animated special features the voice of Walter Matthau. (1:00) Dec. 8, 16, 19, 21, 25

BLUETOES THE CHRISTMAS ELF

Santa's smallest—and seemingly least important—elf teaches Santa's crew that it's not the size of a gift that matters, it's the feeling that counts in this charming animated special. (0:30) Dec. 4, 10, 15, 24

LIGHTS

This animated half-hour special tells the tale of the very first Hanukkah. Narrated by Judd Hirsch. (0:24) Dec. 6, 23, 26

HOLIDAY PROGRAMS

FROSTY'S WINTER WONDERLAND

This animated tale about Frosty the Snowman features the voice of Andy Griffith. (0:30) Nov. 10, 25; Dec. 5, 9, 19, 24, 25

A MATTER OF PRINCIPLE

This intriguing family drama is the story of a man who doesn't believe in Christmas. Stars Alan Arkin and Virginia Madsen. (1:00) Dec. 18, 24

THE CHRISTMAS STAR

Convict Horace McKnickle escapes from prison and takes refuge in the basement of an old house. There he's discovered by two children who mistake him for Santa Claus. McKnickle plans to take advantage of their belief to commit a theft—until he's transformed by their feelings. Stars Ed Asner, Rene Auberjonois, Fred Gwynne, Susan Tyrell. (1:33) Dec. 16, 20, 24, 25

JIM HENSON'S THE CHRISTMAS TOY

Master puppeteer Jim Henson and Kermit the Frog introduce the story of Rusty, a brassy stuffed tiger cub, in this Christmas special. (1:00) Dec. 5, 23, 25

RUDOLPH'S SHINY NEW YEAR

Santa sends Rudolph in search of "Happy," the missing New Year baby in this special. (0:47) Dec. 23, 25, 28, 30

THE CHRISTMAS MESSENGER

Richard Chamberlain narrates this tale, which combines live-action with animation, about a stranger who visits a small town and transforms Christmas. (0:30) Dec. 7, 10, 18, 24

THE CANDLELIGHT CHRISTMAS CEREMONY

This half-hour special focuses on one of the highlights of the holidays at Disneyland—a procession of carolers down Main Street singing the joys of the season in a beautiful candlelight ceremony. (0:30) Dec. 20, 23, 24, 25

A MAGIC KINGDOM YULETIDE SPECIAL

This special also celebrates the holiday season in The Magic Kingdom—in Walt Disney World near Orlando, Florida. (0:30) Dec. 13, 21, 24

A FAMILY CIRCUS CHRISTMAS

Celebrate the season with the family from the newspaper cartoon strip in this animated special. (0:30) Dec. 12, 17, 24
